

KHATERA

Every day I fight for my dreams and goals, and the effort is never in vain. My name is Khatera Hooram, a girl who left her homeland with many hopes and dreams to achieve my goals. I had to leave my country for my safety and to save myself from forced marriage. I am 19 years old and graduated from the 12th grade with a grade of 98.93% from Bibi Hajira Girls' High School in the Takhar province in 2020. My favorite subject at school was mathematics, and I hope to one day become a doctor. I joined Scouting in 2016 and have done many services for my people through the program. I like playing volleyball and was a member of my school volleyball team. I also participated in cultural programs. I had and still have large goals for my life. I participated in the entrance exam and entered the law faculty when I graduated from school, but unfortunately due to the changes in Afghanistan, we girls stopped going to school and university because we were no longer allowed to. The day will come when I can continue my studies, and all my goals and dreams will come true.
